NORFOLK, VA., Atc., 39-Special.—The United States war ships Kearsarge and Nantucket arrived here to-day from New Nantucket arrived here to-day from New York: the officers report that it was 'he roughest trip they ever experienced. The vessels left New York Friday. Sunday heavy fogs set in lasting 12 hours. The ships could not be seen 200 yards. The was carried off by the winds of the hur-ricane which becaused in force years. ricane which increased in force unti-a velocity of 60 miles an hour was reach The seas washed ever the Nantucket which was in tow of the Kearsarge, and with great difficulty that vessel was kept clear of the water; the storm raged furiously all Sunday night.

Monday night the wind increased with heavy seas which at times broke over the turret. The Kearsarge signalled that if the vessels parted in the night and the weather promised good to remain off the Capes, if not, to get to Hampton Roads if possible. Next morning the Kearsarge was not to be seen and the Nantucket turned towards Cape Henry, and after entering the capes, discovered the Kear-sarge. The vessels are safe in port and the men are resting from their struggle with the waves.

Another Damaging Cloud-Burst.

AUGUSTA, GA., August 39.—The fearful storm of Sunday and Monday accom-panied by violent heavy rains, delayed all railroad traffic. The South Carolina road, running from Augusta to Charlesn, is the heavest sufferer. Cloud bursts this afternoon washed away three tres-tles between Branchville and this city. No loss of life is reported, but damage to crops, cotton, corn and fruit is great.

RUSSIA AND ENGLAND.

Why We Feel Justified in Doing More For

the Former Than For the Latter. The London Chronicle, discussing the treaty between the United States and the czar's government, wants to know why in the matter of the extradition of asse we concede to Russia what we have refused to England. The New York Sun accepts The Chronicle's challenge and makes the following reply: We can indicate some general grounds on which we might be strongly impelled to grant privileges to Russia for which England might appeal in vain. As was disclosed by the hostile tone of her newspapers at the time of our demand for an apology and an indemnity from Chili for the massacre of American sailors, England is still no cordial friend of the United States. So far as any tie of blood existe, it seems only to aggravate her jealousy. Not only in that part of her population which is of Irish lineage, but in that still larger and most influential element which traces its descent to the men who created the American colonies and fought the Revolu-tionary war, there is no feeling more deeply rooted or more thoroughly justified by history than that of resentment toward Eng-

To Russia, on the other hand, we are bound by the strongest ties of gratitude and friendship. When we say Russia, we mean not only or mainly the Russian people, but the house of Romanoff, which governs the great northern empire. Never since the beginning of our national life have we suffered an injury at the hands of that dynasty, and we are indebted to it for tremendous services. When, even after Yorktown, George III clung to his determination to subjugate the 13 colonies, Catherine II joined the league of neutrals, which subjected the British ministers to a pressure which they could not resist. Again, when England by her orders in council and Napoleon by his Milan and Berlin decrees were combining to exterminate American commerce, our vessels were welcomed to the Baltic ports by Alexan

In the war of 1812-15, while British soldiers were engaged in burning the capitol at Washington, the same czar, Ale ander I, tried to mediate between the combatants. At the crisis of our national existence, when the Union seemed split in twain and Napoleon III proposed to England to give us a deathblow by a joint intervention—a proposal passionately favored by the English aristocratic and plutocratic classes—Alexander II interposed his veto, and his intentions were signified by the dispatch of a Russian fleet to the harbor of New York and a Russian squadron to San Francisco. Finally, while England had done her best to deprive us of Oregon, Russia ceded to us Alaska at a price ridiculously small if compared with the profits of the seal industry alone.

These are the reasons, if it please the London Chronicle, why the great body of genuine Americans may well feel disposed to do for Russia what they would decline to do for England. When the Radicals, whom The Chronicle represents, make themselves the real masters of Great Britain, when they have hunted the aristocrats out of every nook at 4 cranny of the administra-tion and have revived the splendid common-wealth of Cromwell and Milton, then undoubtedly Americans will look with very different feelings upon their English kinsmen. But not before,

John O'Groat's House,

In the reign of James IV of Scotland John O'Groat and his two brothers-Malcolm and Gavin-arrived at Calthness and bought the lands of Warse and Dugisby, near the beach at the mouth of Penland Firth, the northeastern extremity of the mainland of Scotland. In time their families increased until there were eight house holds of the same name. They lived as neighbors in the greatest peace and amity, each year holding a festival in the original house. At one of these annual gatherings the question of precedence arose among the younger members, and they disputed as to whom should sit nearest the "head of the table" or enter the room first.

The old grandfather, Johnny O'Groat of history, was made arbitrator. He promised to have all satisfactorily settled by the time he built an 8-sided house in which to hold the annual jubilee. This octagonal domi-cile was fitted with a door and a window on each side and a round table in the cen ter. This arrangement made it possible for each family of the O'Groats to enter by his own door and to sit at a table which was practically "without a head." This famous house was long a landmark in Britain and even to this day is one of the Englishman's starting points of measure ment—"Land's End to Johnny O'Groat's" signifying from one end of England to the other.—Philadelphia Press.

A Rich Man's Amusement. There is a merchant in this town, a very successful one, worth probably $125,000 in good hard cash, who takes extreme delight in disguising himself and leading a street parade for the Salvation Army here, although he is not a religious crank nor interested, to my knowledge, in the Salvation Army. I have seen him a number of times nicely disguised with side whiskers and the Salvation Army cap on. The blue, tight fitting uniform is so different from his well fitting black Prince Albert that none of his friends could ever possibly recognize him unless they were on the lookout. This gen tleman has a fine home here and a lucra tive business, but he marches with the Salvation Army for the reason that some poople read a novel-it amuses him.-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Children's Feasts In the North.

In the far north a group of the little hunters is often seen followed by the girls, the latter provided with little pails often a tomato can with a wire bail-and when a number of the birds have been killed the girls pluck them, start a fire and cook them, and all sit down in the sand and have a feast. If eggs are in season, some of the party will have gathered some and a banquet is the result. Two kinds o food at one meal are surely a banquet to them .- Forest and Stream

1. THE REVERIES OF A BACHELOR; OR, A BOOK OF THE HEART. By IK. MARVEL (Donald G. Mitchell.)

This American classic has enjoyed a world wide circulation at its price of .25. It is now offered for the first time at a nominal cost to our sub-How agreeable is "Ik. Marvel" in this gem of a book from his pen, how quaint, how humorous, philosophical, pathetic and charming LAYS OF ANCIENT ROME. By LORD MACAULAY. Beautifully Illustrated. Macaulay's "Lays" are instinct with the very soul of poetry, and are full of heroic action and energy. Like Scott's spirit-stirring ballads, they have a fine picture-sque quality, with graphic breadth and great realistic power of expression. The English, no less than the Roman lays, have the breadth of the battle-field and the sounding notes of the charge to battle. The illustrations of this edition are unique, being executed in delicate outline.

3. A TILLYLOSS SCANDAL. By J. M. BARRIE.

A rew work by J. M. Barrie, author of the Scottish classic, "The Little Minister," which has had a phenomenal sale, may be expected to what the literary appetite of every intelligent reader of high-class fiction. In stories of humble Scottish peasant life, Mr. Barrie is on his own special ground. He knows the characteristics of the Scottish weaver and the peasant class as the sailor knows the sea. His sketches are full of a dry, quaint humor, with a strong realism and great force and directness of narrative power. Never, since Scott's day, has Lowiand Scottish fiction had such an interpreter or so entrancing a decident of character, it up at the same time with old situations and anyusing of character, lit up, at the same time, with odd situations and amusing

4. THE HOUSE OF THE SEVEN GABLES. By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. This masterpiece of Hawthorne's is full of the imaginative charm of romance. In felicity of touch, its author is unapproached by any writer since his own day. The work is, perhaps, the purest piece of poetic prose in all the range of American literature.

"Cranford," in its charming miniature painting and sketches of character, recalls the best of Jane Austen's novels. It is a delightful picture of old world social life in an English country village, descriptive of the feelings, habits, opinions, character and social conditions of the little community. The story is quiet earnestness and with fine literary aptitudes in the writer. It is beautifully

THE COMING RACE. By LORD LYTTON. "The Coming Race," by Lord Lytton, is a clever and ingenious excursion into the realm of science, as the inventive mind of man may find it in the coming time. It presents a curious but fascinating picture of the human environments, as we may see it realized in the next century, when human needs will be served by every resource of electrical and mechanical contrivance—when "the coming race," for instance, will be enabled to exchange domestic helps for instance, and preserve footed automateus and have a comment deless for ingenious and mercury-footed automax-us, and have at command every appliance adapted to the marvellously changed social and industrial condition of things. The work is the product of a fanciful but rarely gifted and versatile

7. DREAM LIFE, By IK. MARVEL (Donald G. Mitchell.) There is a profound mental study in this world-wide American classic. It contains a series of very vivid and picturesque studies of individual character and feeling. It has r fascinating power over the reader, while its graceful dic-tion charms the literary appreciation and fills the mind with delightful, though sometimes pathetic pictures. S. FRANKENSTEIN; OR, THE MODERN PROMETHEUS. By Mrs. Shelley. Like Mrs. Crowe's "Night Side of Nature," Mrs. Shelley's "Frankenstein" is a book every one should read. Its author has great imaginative powers and a welrd but original genius. There are passages in "Frankenstein" that appai the mind and make the flesh creep. Once read, the book can hardly ever be for-

9. A BOOK OF GOLDEN DEEDS. By C. M. YONGE,

This is just the book to put into the hand of youth, circulating a healthy morality, and true manly and womanly sentiments. Few books are better formed than this to develop and mould the tastes of the rising generation and encourage ontimistic and patriotic ideas. 10. MOSSES FROM AN OLD MANSE. By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

Another delightful companion for idle hours is this collection of magazine papers, which Hawthorne entitled "Mosses from an Old Manse." Like all his works, it is distinguished for its simplicity and truth. Its high literary excellence commends it anew to public favor.

11. THE SCARLET LETTER. By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. A romance of intense interest, exhibiting extraordinary power of mental analysis and graphic description. For an artistic exposition of Puritanism, as modified by New England colonial life, we have nothing like it in our literature. Like the best of Scott's novels, it is true at once to the local manners and scenic features of the age and place.

12. ESSAYS OF ELIA. By CHARLES LAMB. These charming essays are full of a gay humor, interspersed with many sly hits, happy puns and bright scintillations of wit; carefully elaborated as they are, hits, happy puns and the utmost ease and grace, and composed in a spirit at they are written with the utmost ease and grace, and composed in a spirit at once delicate and unobtrusive. Seeking his material in the common paths of life-even the humblest-Lamb gives an importance to everything and sheds a

13. VICAR OF WAKEFIELD. By OLIVER GOLDSMITH. This beautifully illustrated edition of a famous English classic will increase its attractions for those who recognize the claim it has as essentially a "home book" for the whole reading world. Goldsmith has shed over the world the tenderest light of his genius, and the pastoral scenes in it are unrivalled, we had almost said unapproached, by any other writer of fiction. As Sir Walter Scott said of it, "We read the Vicar of Wakefield in youth and in age, and return to the age of the said of it." to it again and again, and bless the memory of an author who contrives so well to reconcile us to human nature." The book, throughout its fascinating pages, exhibits all the characteristic traits of "Poor Poli"—a genial fancy, and the most diverting simplicity.

14. TWICE TOLD TALES. By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. Hawthorne, the most distinctly American and by far the most popular of our writers, has given the world an undying book in "Twice-Told Tales." The stories were originally contributed to an Annual, published now over fifty years ago, and being subsequently reprinted, are in reality "Twice-Told Tales." They have all the felicity of expression, as well as the subtlety of thought and insight, which are the special charm of the author of "The Scarlet Letter." Each story breathes its own air of contemplation, and its effect is heightened by the felicities of style no less than by the imaginative genius of the author.

15. PAUL AND VIRGINIA. By BERNARDIN DE SAINT PIEBRE. This idyllic story, by a classic French writer of the wholesome romantic school, is an immortal book, and has wen a place for itself in the homes of almost every people who possess a literature and can appreciate the work of genius. It may, with some literary propriety, be termed an idealized Robinson Crusoe, and it has all the fascination of that renowned work. It is a book that is sure to go down the centuries, charming as well as edifying generations yet unborn.

16. STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM. By (Ralph Iron) OLIVE SCHREINER

6. STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM. By (Ralph Iron) OLIVE SCHREINER.

Under the nom de plume of Ralph Iron, Miss Olive Schreiner has written an extraordinarily powerful story, full of graphic descriptions and the most appealing pathos. The author seems to have followed no recognized mode of romance, but struck out a new path in fiction for herself. Her novel consists of a series of studies illustrating the wild life of an orchard farm in South Africa, and setting before the reader, with striking vigor, the problems which trouble a strong intelligence and an imaginative ambition, remote from any possibility of culture. The work, which leaves an abiling memory on every reader, is one of the most remarkable novels of the age.

remarkable novels of the age. 17. LAYS OF THE SCOTTISH CAVALIERS. (In Press.)

By W.M. EDMONSTOUNE AYTOUN.

These stirring ballads of Professor Aytoun, of Blackwood fame, have their only rival in Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome." Their popularity is not lessened by the fact that they are to be met with in every school reader and in the repertoire of most elocutionists and platform declaimers. Nor is popular approciation affected by the fact that their author, in enshrining in patriotic and soul-stirring verse the heroic incidents of Scottish history, takes the "Royalist" side as against that of the "Covenanters." By WM. EDMONSTOUNE AYTOUN.

18. LUCILE. (In Press.) By OWEN MEREDITH (Robert Lord Lytton.)

"Lucile." by the second Lord Lytton, late Governor-General of India and British Ambassador to Paris, is a novel in verse, with rhymed couplets, cast somewhat in the mould of Mrs. Browning's "Aurora Leigh." It is an enchanting story, with a strong admixture of romantic thought, plus fertility of invention and brilliant dialogue.

19. DREAMS. (In Press.) By (Ralph Iron) OLIVE SCHREINER.

Though unlike the "Story of an African Farm," "Dreams" has many of the characteristics which made Miss Schreiner's early work famous. The book is both interesting and suggestive, and, besides its high meditative qualities, is rich in the discussion of those mental and moral problems which this clever writer delights to propound to herself and lay before the thoughtful reader. "Dreams" is manifestly the work of a rare and uncommon mind. 20. BLACK BEAUTY. (In Press.) By ANNA SEWELL.

"Black Beauty" is a horse, and the story Miss Sewell so feelingly tells us is its autobiography. The tale well deserves its great popularity, for it is wonderfully realistic, and makes a strong appeal to those who love dumb animals and possess the instinct of common humanity. It is a brok to charm and impress all who have to do with horses, especially those who seek to suppress that most senseless of all vices, cruelty to animals.
